

Trends in Equity Approaches

August 2010

This survey examines whether or not banks use equity as part of their overall compensation program. For banks that use equity, we present information regarding what type of equity they grant, the company, individual, etc. performance measures upon which Banks base the equity grants, how frequently grants are made, and vesting.

For purposes of this flash survey, full value equity examples may include but are not limited to restricted stock, phantom stock, and restricted stock units. Appreciation equity examples may include but are not limited to stock options and stock appreciation rights.

OVERVIEW

A total of 39 banks participated in our survey on equity trends. However, 12 banks reported not having an equity program at this time. Therefore, the tables provided in this report are based on the responses of 27 banks.

Types of Equity Granted

- Full value equity grants are more prevalent than appreciation equity grants across all cuts of data (asset size, location, and ownership structure). 41% of banks have either increased their use of full value equity since plans were last evaluated, or intend to increase use based on planned future changes. 37% of banks have decreased their usage of appreciation equity vehicles.
- 41% of banks make grants exclusively in the form of full-value grants.
- 15% of banks make grants exclusively in the form of appreciation grants.
- 44% of banks grant a combination of both full-value and appreciation equity. Of these banks, the combination of full-value to appreciation grants is approximately 50/50 on average.

Equity Grant Determination

- 52% of the banks providing equity grants make them based on a combination of overall bank performance, department, and individual performance. One-third of the banks making equity grants make them based on the discretion of the board. 11% are based on overall bank performance, and 4% are based on individual performance.
